

The Da Vinci Code Dan Brown

FOR BLYTHE... ASKING MORE THAN EVER.

Acknowledgments

First and foremost, to my friend and editor, Steve Kaufman, for working so hard on this project and for truly understanding what this book is all about. And to the incomparable Heidi Lange—student champion of The Da Vinci Code, agent extraordinaire, and trusted friend.

I cannot fully express my gratitude to the exceptional team at Doubleday for their generosity, faith, and expert guidance. Thanks go especially to Bill Thomson and Nina Rubin, who believed in this book from the start. My thanks also to the initial cast of early-to-behave reviewers, headed by Michael Poljan, Suzanne Blinn, Harold Motzary, Jack E. Conroy, and Adrienne Sparks, as well as to the talented people of Doubleday's sales force.

For their generous assistance in the research of the book, I would like to acknowledge the Louvre Museum, the French Ministry of Culture, Project Gutenberg, Bibliothèque Nationale, the Grand Secret Library, the Department of Printing, Study, and Documentation Services at the Louvre, Catholic World News, Royal Observatory Greenwich, London Record Society, the Manuscript Collection at Westminster Abbey, John Fair and the Filiation of American Scientists, and the five members of Open-For-All (three active, two former) who recounted their stories, both positive and negative, regarding their experiences inside Open-For-All.

My greatest debt is to Walter Isaacson for making direct to many of my research books; my father, Richard Brown—mathematics teacher and author—for his assistance with the Da Vinci Prologues and the Da Vinci Appendix; and friends, Brian Brinkman, Peter McLaughlin, Francis Williams, Maggie Wacker, Andrei Yonov, Ken Kufner at Architectural Web Media, Cary Siskel, Karis Pugh, Esther Song, Miriam Abramowitz, William Tinsell Paine, and Griffin Wacker Brown.

And finally, in a novel dying to be truly on the sacred timeline, I would be naive if I did not mention the two extraordinary women who have touched my life. First, my mother, Corina Brown—lifelong reader, writer, musician, and role model. And my wife, Blythe—my love.
