BUILDERS SHOW OFF 'GREEN' DESIGN PROCESS

Green living

By Nancy Meehan

It didn't occur to all we have shared in the environmental design process that while some people are trying to live off their own backs, there are others who are trying to make the world a better place by offering green living solutions.

Model opens at Church Street Village

Church Street Village, a development by Ryan Homes, has recently opened its green model/office and is currently accepting offers for the Church Street Village. The higher end model would have a lot of green features, including solar panels, rainwater harvesting, and energy-efficient appliances. The model is currently open at Church Street Village, and is open to the public. Ryan Homes is currently accepting offers for the Church Street Village. The model is currently open at Church Street Village, and is open to the public.

Check Street Village

In the home, one can create a living space that which is both beautiful and functional. All of the features are designed to be both beautiful and functional. The model is currently open at Church Street Village, and is open to the public.
