

DIVERSITY WITHIN TECHNOLOGY

By Sandy Li

Illusion of Diversity

When people think of Diversity they think of colors. Colors of race, colors of sex, and colors of religion. In this world, we have a lot of colors, but we always place significance on one color. The focus of this project is on the technology sector of society. We frequently relate technology with societal progress and increasing acceptance. However, recent studies have actually revealed that the tech industry has not been improving itself on issues of diversity and inclusion. Silicon Valley is the tech hub of the United States. There are hundreds if not thousands of startups within this region with huge companies like Alphabet, Apple, and Facebook as its backbone. These companies have always set themselves as one of the most diverse industries, but the truth is that the companies are having a hard time tackling the issues of diversity within their companies.

Example: Apple, "Do you feel the diversity from the photo?"
