ERROLL GARNER

ONE WORLD CONCERT II

Side 1: Sweet and lovely Side 2: Mack the knife - Thanks for the memory

When Erroll Garner, Edward Calhoun and Kelvin Martin played at the Seattle World's Fair Playhouse, they drove audiences wild with their swinging performances. The large number of nationalities attending the Garner concerts in Seattle gave birth to the idea of calling this EP (as well as the LP from which it was drawn) "ONE WORLD CONCERT." But not all the world could be there of course. Those who missed out on joining in one of the greatest in-person performances since the war may regret the omission; but they may take comfort from the knowledge that this EP and its companion LP are on hand to give them a sharp and accurate impression of exactly how and why Garner succeeded as he did. That great artist's élan, freedom and swing are all captured, as well as the atmosphere that made these things possible. For the programme was "unprogrammed" and Garner is relying on his audience to stimulate his superb improvisatory sense. How well they succeeded we leave you to judge - but we know what that judgement will be. For Erroll himself, the people who were on the spot and now you, who listen to the music, the record is something of a symbol. Erroll speaks often of music as the strong tie which unites people of all nations, and in "ONE WORLD CONCERT" he certainly gives an outstanding demonstration of what he means. For those magic hours the audience forgot all colour, creed and racial pride. They were one in their response to unforgettable piano playing. And now the record goes out to the world and draws you, too, into the charmed circle of those who can make music the thing that really counts.
