THE HINDUISM OF TO-DAY.

SWAMI VIVEKANANDA'S lectures on Hinduism, delivered in America and England, appear in book form, and have been reviewed by the Madras Hindu newspaper. It is not necessary to traverse this book, as that would lead us into the region of wormout controversy. It is enough to remark that Vivekananda's book, whatever its merits, does not give us a view of papaliar Hinduism, which many know is full of hideous defects calling for immediate removal.

It is not so much the Hinduism that attracts the attention of Western scholars as the Hinduism operating on the masses which should concern all interested in the spiritual welfare of India. Glancing at the Hinduism about us we must sadly admit that, whatever of the elevating may be found to exist in its fountain head, there is nothing encouraging in the stream as it reaches the multitude.

Of course, we shall be told by Vivekananda and those who would regenerate India that the mass is to be taken by the hand and led back to the purity of faith which it has lost sight of in the effluxions of time. The task is so tremedious as to appear almost beyond the reach of necomplishment. Ages on ages have added to the dust necumulating on belief, and this soil cannot be removed as readily as Hindu religious reformers seem to anticipate. The fact is that Hinduism has had its fair trial and come out of the ordent attered and torn and almost stripped to nudity.

It is almost amusing while reading the speculations of schoolmen to cast our eye on the barren multitude to whom religion is not a power in life, but a mere compound of meaningless ceremonices and hideous superity will rise to a true place among the nations of the world. meaningless ceremonies and hideous superit will rise to a true place among the nations of the world.
